PREFACE

Since the London Library issued its last Catalogue in 1888, there has been an immense increase in the accumulation of books and in their circulation, and likewise in the number of the members. In 1888 the volumes catalogued numbered 100,000; there are at present on the shelves about 220,000 volumes. In 1888 the members numbered 1,952; now they number 2,897. In 1888 the receipts were £5,221; they are now £7,481. This very considerable growth of the Library, and the extension of its importance and influence, made the issue of a new and complete Catalogue a matter of necessity.

The Catalogue of 1888 was merely an enlarged edition of the Catalogues of 1842, 1847, 1865, and 1875. Within a very few years it became more or less obsolete, and the stock was nearly sold out. The Committee accordingly resolved to issue an entirely new Catalogue; and, in 1894, they appointed a sub-committee (which consisted of Sir Leslie Stephen, K.C.B., the president, Mr. Austin Dobson, Mr. Frederic Harrison, Mr. Sidney Lee, and Mr. Henry R. Tedder) to consider the form which the Catalogue should take, and the best mode of preparing it for publication.

The sub-committee found at once, and convinced their colleagues, that no mere extension or revision of the existing catalogues would ensure efficiency. The work had to be organised entirely de novo, as if no materials upon which to build existed; and the first thing to be done was to draw up a scheme of rules to govern the entries, and to decide upon the most convenient form in which the Catalogue should be printed.

The time required for the preparation and printing of the present Catalogue has somewhat exceeded the period that was at first anticipated. But, considering the difficulties to be overcome, it is scarcely surprising that this should be the case. To catalogue accurately and exhaustively a collection of 220,000 volumes in almost every language ancient or modern, is in itself no ordinary task. And it should be remembered that the London Library is a lending Library, with from 15,000 to 16,000 volumes constantly in transit, and in the hands of members. A large and fluctuating percentage of the 220,000 volumes were not available at the moment when they were needed by the cataloguer, for each entry has been compiled from the book itself. It should also be remembered that from the beginning of 1896 to the end of 1898 the building was under entire reconstruction, and the continual displacement of volumes due to such conditions caused great and prolonged inconvenience to all those engaged in the administration and in the cataloguing of the Library not less than to the members.

The reconstruction of the building with ample space for the extension of the Library for many years to come, and the completion of the new Catalogue—both accomplished within the period from 1895 to 1903 —promise still further to promote the usefulness of the Library, which in the last fifteen years has more than doubled the number of its volumes, and has increased its income by £2,260.

One of the most difficult problems to be solved was how to produce an exhaustive and minute catalogue of 220,000 volumes, with all the sub-entries and cross-references needed to make it efficient, and yet to set it up in a form that could be conveniently handled by a large body of general readers. The previous Catalogues, finally embodied in that of 1888, were large octavos of some hundreds of pages, with about 45 entries on each page. The Catalogue of 1888 has 1,624 8vo pages (including an Appendix). The present Catalogue has 1,626 larger pages of double columns, each having an average of about 104 entries. The entries contained in this Catalogue are nearly three times as many as those in the Catalogue of 1888. For example (to take the names of standard authors long deceased), the entries under the name of Dante in the Catalogue of 1888 number 58. In the present Catalogue they amount to over 200. The entries under Charles Darwin in the Catalogue of 1888 number 26. In the present Catalogue they amount to 54. The entries under Jonathan Swift in the Catalogue of 1888 amount to 28. In the present Catalogue they number 55.

While it is to be regretted that the smaller page of octavo had to be abandoned for a double column page of quarto, of smaller and closer print, it will be seen that the change became inevitable in a work wherein nearly three-times the amount of matter had to be comprised.

Every possible contrivance has been adopted to economise space and to obtain clearness for reading, while offering the work to subscribers at a moderate price. The type, the paper, and the form were only chosen after long consideration and various experiments. The objection to issuing a serviceable catalogue in anything but a single volume seemed decisive, and reasons of cost prevented the resort to any of the specially fine papers. The system of abbreviations (of which a table is added) was adopted to reduce the bulk. It is hoped that subscribers will easily accustom themselves to their use. To have dispensed with such abbreviations would have added materially to the size and cost of the work, and would have rendered it too large for convenient handling.

The preparation of the Catalogue had to be carried on without interfering with the daily business of the Library as a circulating collection in continual movement, and without interfering with the duties of the Librarian and the staff in the ordinary administration of the Society.

The cataloguing staff consisted of the Librarian (Mr. Hagberg Wright), the late Mr. Russell, and two, recently three, junior assistants. In August 1901 the sudden death of Mr. Russell, who devoted his whole time to this most laborious work, greatly impeded the task of cataloguing the large collections and serial publications, and of revising and editing for press the slips on which the entries were made. This very important part of the task was thereupon undertaken by the Librarian in addition to the general supervision which he had given from the first. Mr. Russell's decease was a disaster the effect of which could only be fully estimated by those engaged in the work.

Expertus disces quam gravis iste labor.

One of the assistants began his labours in the cataloguing room in 1895 at the age of fourteen, and the other in 1898 at the age of sixteen, both having come straight from school. Their diligence and application have been exceptional. The cataloguing of 220,000 volumes (omitting large collections, and serial publications of societies) occupied three years, from June 1895 to July 1898, giving an average of 260 volumes for each working day, at a cost of £100 for every 32,000 volumes. Then the revision and editing for the press of the slips on which the entries were made occupied three and a half years more, from August 1898 to February 1902.

The printing was begun in February 1902, and has been carried on by Messrs. Spottiswoode & Co., Limited, with remarkable rapidity and completeness. This firm, to whom the Committee entrusted the work, provided a special set of types, machinery, and staff of compositors and readers. They have completed a work of a peculiarly complicated nature, which probably contains 2,170,000 words, within about twelve months, sending out the quarto sheets at the rate of eight pages (or 8,000 words) per diem. The correction of so large a quantity of proofs, at such a rate of progress, has entailed great and protracted labour.

The total cost of preparing the MS. copy and of printing and binding an edition of 3,000 copies of the Catalogue (irrespective of the labours of the Librarian in editing the entire work) has amounted to £4,250.

The London Library, which has now been established more than sixty years, is so well known, and its history and progress have been so often described in various reports, that it is unnecessary to refer to them at length. It may be useful, however, to remind the members of the following facts. The Library was founded by a body of eminent scholars and public men, primarily at the suggestion of Thomas Carlyle, and it was opened for use on May 1, 1841. It was designed to "contain books in all departments of literature and philosophy, and in all languages, its chief distinguishing feature being the privilege enjoyed by subscribers of having books at their homes, both in London and in the country." In the first year of its work the number of volumes issued amounted to 14,804. At the date of the last Report the number amounted to 126,074. The progress of the Library may be practically measured by the increasing bulk of its Catalogue. The Catalogue of 1842 was a thin octavo volume of 140 pages; that of 1847 had grown to 512 pages; that of 1865 had 930 pages; that of 1875 had 1,022 pages: the Catalogue of 1888 contained 1,161 pages, with an Appendix in a separate volume of 463 pages. The present Catalogue, by the use of smaller type, double columns and contractions, contains, in one volume, nearly three times the matter, without increasing the number of pages.

The Library contains every sort of book, from books on Sundials to books on the ancient Sabæans. Among its treasures are such valuable books as the 1557 edition of Sir Thomas More's English works, Migne's complete collection of the Patrologia, Bouquet's Recueil des Historiens des Gaules et de la France, Pertz's Monumenta Germaniæ historica, Acta Sanctorum, besides rare county histories and numerous original authorities in English history. Perhaps one of the most distinguishing features of the Library is the excellence of the collection of foreign works, which is carefully kept up to date.

The only absolute restriction imposed by the Society in the selection of books is the exclusion of new books of a merely ephemeral and trivial character, and of purely technical or professional works. "The London Library," it has been frequently repeated, "was not designed to compete with ordinary circulating libraries, or with libraries of a special or professional character," such as those of Universities, Inns of Court, or scientific societies.

The present premises in St. James's Square (formerly known as Beauchamp House) were occupied by the Society under a lease in 1845, and in 1879 the freehold of the whole of the premises was purchased. On this ground the buildings were reconstructed in 1896 at a cost of something under £20,000, and the new rooms were opened in December 1898. There is now, within the Society's own freehold, shelf-room for about 350,000 volumes, a number which will not be reached for very many years to come.

The Presidents of the London Library since 1841 have been the Earl of Clarendon (1841), Thomas Carlyle (1870), Lord Houghton (1881), Lord Tennyson (1885), Sir Leslie Stephen, K.C.B. (1893). The Librarians have been Mr. J. G. Cochrane (1841), Mr. William Bodham Donne (1852), Mr. Robert Harrison (1857), and Mr. C. T. Hagberg Wright, LL.D. (1893).

During the sixty-two years of its existence the London Library has had the support of a large proportion of the most eminent scholars, writers, and public servants of the country, who have often given expression to their lively sense of the assistance which they have derived from it in their literary and public work. It may now fairly claim to be the largest and most important lending library of its kind in Europe.

The Library is honoured by the patronage of His Majesty the King, and within the last ten years it has included among its office-bearers three Prime Ministers, together with a considerable body of men who have held high offices in the public service. The Committee has always numbered in its ranks not only scholars and men of letters, but also men trained in business and in practical administration. And it is largely due to the care which they have given to the conduct of its financial affairs that the Committee has been able to report in a uniformly favourable sense on the material prosperity of the Library and its property.

It is intended to issue a new Subject Catalogue at a later date.

In sending out this volume it is pleasing to acknowledge the help which has been received from members and others. Dr. J. Morison and Mr. Frederic Harrison have read through the proof-sheets, and made many valuable suggestions.

Mr. Geoffrey Williams and Herr Theodor von Wilmersdoerffer, of Munich, have during the last seven years devoted much time and labour to answering the numerous queries raised during the compilation of the Catalogue, and special thanks are due to them. Mr. H. B. Wheatley, Mr. David Hannay, Mr. E. Hilliard, and Mr. A. W. K. Miller have at various times been equally liberal of their knowledge and advice. Acknowledgments are also due to the numerous publishers who, during the preparation of the Catalogue, have so obligingly replied to the many questions addressed to them.

This Catalogue contains all books added to the Library up to December 31, 1901.

NOTES

THE FOLLOWING HINTS MAY ASSIST IN THE USE OF THIS CATALOGUE.

General Plan.—The first principle on which the books are arranged is that they are put under the names of their authors. These are given in alphabetical order, and under each the titles of their books are alphabetically arranged.

Where books are catalogued under the same name, as "Henry" for example, they are arranged in the following order:

(1) Anonymous Books (and Place-names)	Henry Dunbar. (novel).
(2) Periodicals and Societies	Henry Bradshaw Society.
(3) Christian names with distinctive title, epithet or place-name	Henry I, King of England.
(4) Surnames	Henry (Alexander).

Books to be found under Christian Names.—(A.) Where either a book's title or the author thereof is known by a Christian name without a surname, but with a distinctive title, epithet, or place-name, the books have been arranged according to the alphabetical order of the place-name or nickname, neglecting the prepositions of, de, von etc., and such words as bishop, king, archbishop:

John, king of Abyssinia.
John of Alexandria.
John of Amundesham.
John, king of England.
John the Faster.
John of France.
John, pope.
John de Troyes.
&c.

(B.) Christian names appearing on title-pages have generally been given in full. If the author has other Christian names, only the initials of these have been given as a rule. Where the insertion of such initials throws a name out of its expected alphabetical position, a cross-reference has been given.

Names of Noblemen.—Noblemen have been entered under their titles except where the family names are better known, as for example Horace Walpole under Walpole, not under Orford.

Modified Vowels.—The modified vowels have been treated, as regards their alphabetical arrangement, as simple a e i o u.

Apostrophe.—An apostrophe occurring in a title heading,* e.g. Smith's Dict^y, has been neglected in the alphabetical arrangement.

Compound names etc.—In the case of authors having compound surnames, or changing their names, or whose names include a preposition or an article or both, that form has been adopted to which a reader would most readily turn.

Variations of Names.—Variations of the name are given in small capitals within brackets, and cross-references have been liberally supplied.

Anonymous Books etc.—(A.) The entries of anonymous books are marked by an asterisk; and such works have been catalogued under (1) the first word of the title, excluding the article, (2) the author's name, when that has been ascertained, (3) the important word of the title, (4) initials of authors, when these are given.

(B.) Books whose authors are indicated by initials only, or by a descriptive phrase, have been treated as anonymous.

(C.) In addition to searching all available works of reference to discover the authorship of anonymous books, or to verify the author's name when authorities were doubtful or conflicting, much original investigation has been undertaken; the correspondence thus occasioned with authors, publishers, and others, in Great Britain and abroad, has amounted to more than 2,000 letters, which contain much valuable information, and have been preserved for reference. Many authors, however, while acknowledging authorship, have preferred to conceal their identity; and in such cases the name has not been revealed.

* The "title heading" is the technical term used for the words printed in antique (or black) type in the catalogue.

British Museum Catalogue.—As regards general plan and arrangement the B.M.C. has been taken as the standard and chief reference-book. Many of its bibliographical notes have, after verification, been embodied in the London Library Catalogue. And, in order to facilitate reference to the B.M.C., the form of an author's name therein adopted has been added in brackets and preceded by a (†), in all cases where a different form of name has been preferred as the catchword or heading in the London Library Catalogue. Further, in the case of authors with similar names, a designation (e.g. M.A.: engraver; minister) corresponding to the designation in the B.M.C. has been added after the names of such authors with a view to their ready identification.

Change of Title of Book.—Change of title from one edition to another is noted. See, for example, the entries under Hastings (Warren), Osborne (O.), and Tremenheere (H. S.)

Editors and Translators.—References have been made from editors and translators only when the work is difficult to find under its true title, as in the case of Oriental names, etc., or, when exceptional interest attaches to the editor, as in the case of J. A. Symonds's translation of Cellini's Life.

Incomplete Works.—When the publication of a work has been arrested before completion, care has been taken to ascertain from publishers, etc., the exact amount of actual publication, and also if further publication is to be expected. If a work is incomplete or in progress, this is indicated in the entry, as e.g. v1–6; if complete, 6v.

London Suburbs.—Places which are only in modern times, and in popular language, counted as parts of London, are not grouped under London, but are given separately under their respective headings.

Place of Publication.—Much space has been saved by omitting systematically the names of certain places of publication which frequently recur. For example:—

Berlin	is omitted where titles of works are in			German
Bucuresci	,,	,,	,,	Roumanian
Buda-Pesth	,,	,,	,,	Hungarian
Christiania	,,	,,	,,	Norwegian
Copenhagen	,,	,,	,,	Danish
Lisbon	,,	,,	,,	Portuguese
London	,,	,,	,,	English
Madrid	,,	,,	,,	Spanish
Paris	,,	,,	,,	French
Rejkjavík	,,	,,	,,	Icelandic
Rome	,,	,,	,,	Italian
St. Petersburg	,,	,,	,,	Russian
Stockholm	,,	,,	,,	Swedish

*The following are the abbrev*ns *of places of publ*n.

A.	=Amsterdam	M'ter.	=Manchester
C.	=Cambridge	N.Y.	=New York
D.	=Dublin	O.	=Oxford
E.	=Edinburgh	St.	=Stuttgart
L.	=Leipzig	Str.	=Strassburg
Liv'l.	=Liverpool	W.	=Washington

Publishers.—Publishers' names have been inserted when of special literary importance.

Size.—The manner of dealing with the sizes of books has been rough and ready. Three sizes have been used, octavo, quarto, folio, and each has been sub-divided into three, as small octavo, octavo, and large octavo, etc.

Works in Several Vols.—The contents of works in several volumes have been carefully given, wherever such indications would save consulters from asking for the whole of a work when they need part only. Such indications are necessary also, for the reason that many works, especially German works, have second, or even third, title-pages for each volume.

Other Details.—An asterisk placed before the title of a book indicates that the book was published anonymously.

When the heading in the London Library Catalogue differs from that of the British Museum Catalogue, a † has been placed in front of the B.M. form which has been put in square brackets.

[ ] Information not derived from the title-page of a volume is placed within square brackets: thus, v[1–14, shows that volumes 1–14 are not numbered on their title-pages.

3v in 6[2i iv]. Small Roman figures indicate the parts of a volume: thus v1; 2i, ii, iii, iv; 3 means that the second volume has four parts.

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS

In the great majority of cases the contractions used are, it is hoped, clear from the context. The list appended is given in order to remove any possible ambiguity.

In inflected languages, where the terminations are variable according to context, one form alone is given below.

The following endings, among others, are systematically omitted:—
